Ask yourself:

- What matters to you? Why?
- What are you good at? What are your strengths? How do you become the best version of you?
- How do you prefer to work with others? How do you improve your teamwork skills? How can you get better at handling conflict?
- Where do you want to contribute in your community?

Centennial Leadership Academy (CLA)

... will answer those questions with you! We will help you

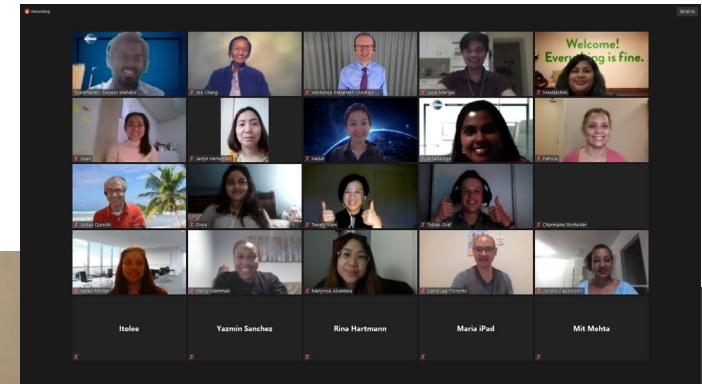

- build skills like communication, interpersonal, teamwork, conflict management and action planning
- reflect on experiences that matter to you
- develop a community of friends and a supportive network

How do we make that happen?

Toastmasters

- All about public speaking and running meetings!
- International non-profit dedicated to developing leadership and communication skills

How I Stopped Procrastinating

by Lenyfer Garido, Pre-Grad Nursing Student

I like to be productive and am obsessed about getting things done. Apart from being a student, I am also a life coach and I organize online challenges for my clients. In my free time I volunteer at Our Lady of Lourdes Church. I'm also writing a children's book inspired by kids with Autism Spectrum Disorder.

In high school I would always stay up late chatting online. This would make me frequently late for school – a habit I had until college. Once while studying, I pulled an all-nighter. During the test, my mind blanked out. I failed the test and needed to retake the subject.

I didn't really learn how to study effectively until I starting the nursing program. There is a lot of information in each subject that you cannot cram into a night of studying. I started using different types of agendas and scheduling tools, and my procrastination started to slowly wane. Here's what I learned:

In this edition
