

Module 4: Introduction Video Transcript

So, I'm in class. It's halfway through the semester and I'm sitting in the Zoom room. No one has their cameras on. The instructor just drones on and on for 2.5 hours. Sometimes we'll get put into breakout rooms. But nobody ever talks. I've even had a few classmates tell me the class is so boring they just log in and then play video games.

The only question the instructor asks is, "Are there any questions?". There never are. They think it means everyone gets it so clearly on the first go. In truth, everyone is so bored and disconnected, nobody is paying attention.

There's no sense of community. Nobody is having fun. I assume. I don't actually know, because I don't get a chance to talk to anyone. If everyone is having the same experience as me, which seems likely, then, yeah, no one is engaged.
