

Video 3.5 Based on data collected, we know that racial discrimination exists in sport. Due to lack of awareness in reporting, this is a topic that does not receive enough attention, nor is it adequately addressed through policy or education. The system needs more leaders that have the ability to relate, emphasize and deal with this issue. We must promote the equitable treatment of all sport participants and need to ensure underrepresented groups feel supported and free to train and compete in a sport environment free from discrimination. Education and sensitivity training is a key step to recognizing and addressing racism in sport, and I'm committed to supporting a positive change in the months to come.
