A Louisbourg 1. 8bre 1738

Sir

I received the one you did me the honour to write, to which you allow me to answer according to my thoughts. You did well to send Mr. LeLoutre to Port Royal to replace Mr de St. Poncy, you did even better to approve the choice made by divine providence that he could stay with the mikmak. I cannot tell you with what application he studied their language all the time we have been together his attachment (?) was such that it was not possible for me to look in any other book than in mikmak notebooks, to answer as much as my small knowledge allowed, all the questions that he asked me daily; I could never get anything more from him than two hours of time after supper to alternately see the Scripture and moral theology. He currently knows how to say grace to God, how to deal with the sauvages whom he instructs and he confesses very well, he also has the gift of making himself feared among them, which infallibly contributes to the improvement of the most undisciplined among them. May God give him the grace to persevere as he begins and he will be rewarded for the pains he has taken. He currently does missionary work in the lands of l'akadie where many sauvages have been expecting a missionary for a long time The consolation he must have is to be with a flock more docile than mine. We can only hope to have a third one for the sauvages of Isle St Jean who are extremely disordered because they almost never see The missionary. But we need a person who has the temperament to act in concert with the missionaries of l'Akadie, and of Isle Royale; and by this means we would quickly reduce the indocility of the Mi'kmaq and fix their fickleness. we are very happy to learn that Mr. de St. Vincent is returning next year. we are as ever convinced and persuaded that all that has been imputed to him is only the effect of the darkest calumny. It is a lie to say that he has money since no one knows better than the sisters of the Congregation, Mr le Loutre and me the embarrassment he was in at Louisbourg when Mr. the Norman only wanted to give him half of his appointments. The most selfless missionary in this country is necessarily subject to hear similar reproaches. judge how far the prejudice goes. here is how we reason. Such a missionary did such business, so this one does the same. I do not fear anything like that though.

As I have this confidence in God, that if I am of any usefulness to the Mi'kmaq of Lisle Royale, he will not allow me to be accused with impunity for doing what I do not do, and never want to do we ask you, sir, to kindly tell Mr de Mézi, we cannot enough show him our love and gratitude for the kindness and attention that he has for us. No doubt that what you will tell him about this, will commit him to do more. we are very happy to spare him from any inconveniences, because no one in the world is in a better place to serve the colony; especially when food is scarce, we must rely on him for the relief of our sauvages. and, for what is lacking in our Churches, and we address him as well for many other necessities I am, sir, with a very deep respect, your very humble and very obedient servant, Maillard priest miss.

We kindly ask you not to forget us during the Most Holy Sacrifice

Sir

In the circumstances in which the Saurages are, if we abandon them, they will unquestionably have the occasion to surrender to the english who expect that moment every day. Thus Mr. Manach will do very well spending the winter in l'akadie near Mr LeLoutre and me between Isle Royalle and Nantigouèche (?) so that we are always within reach of knowing what their strategies are Mr Manach benefited a lot from the winter he spent with me. He is able to get there in a short time among the mikmak nation as much by his zeal as by the new knowledge he has acquired. we ask you, sir, to send us someone like him next spring this is what we need for our missions. Monsieur LeLoutre will not continue his work for a long time. So, it is necessary that before he abandons us we find someone who can succeed him. please do your best for this. Everything is going relatively well on Isle Royale since we have a Governor who seems to love religion. I learn that the war of l'akadie will end this winter without any misery for the whole colony. I believe that Mr Le Loutre intensely wishes for this moment. I send to Mr. de l'Isle Dieu my power of attorney and my certificate of life so that I may by this means receive every year the pension that the King gave me, upon its due date; I hope, sir, that you would like to hire someone of the seminary to take charge of the said power of attorney so that I am paid every year. I would be very obliged to you

I don't want to multiply my demand, but my lack of health obliges me as my former vigour has abandoned me. Moreover, the sauvages that God has entrusted me will profit from the grace the King has granted me as I will thereby be less intrusive vis-à-vis mr l'intendant. We recommend all three to the prayers of the seminary; As for me, I pray you to remember me at St Sacrifice. I am with much respect and consideration
